

Tenure-track Faculty Position in Higher Education Policy and Leadership
Department of Leadership, Policy and Organizations
Peabody College, Vanderbilt University

The Department of Leadership, Policy and Organizations (LPO) of Peabody College, Vanderbilt University invites applications for an open rank tenure-track faculty position in Higher Education leadership and policy. Junior candidates should have a promising program of research and a commitment to seeking external funding. More senior candidates should have an established program of research and a track record in securing external funding. All candidates should have a commitment to excellence in teaching (including undergraduates), and an interest in working collaboratively with other faculty, students and staff.

We request applicants whose research examines the ways in which institutional, state, federal or international policies affect student participation and success in higher education. The new faculty member will teach classes pertaining to public policy, organizational behavior, or student success in higher education. For inquiries contact Professor Will Doyle (w.doyle@vanderbilt.edu)

The mission of the Department of Leadership, Policy and Organizations is to understand and enhance the political, economic, organizational, and social contexts in which human learning takes place. The department embraces multiple methodological and disciplinary approaches to the study of policies and practices that can improve outcomes for students and their families, and enhance organizational effectiveness and reform. The department operates graduate programs in K-12, international, and higher education leadership and policy (including an MPP degree), as well as an undergraduate major in leadership and organizational effectiveness, policy, and international education. These programs are ranked among the highest in the nation.
